ADY BANK

ROYAL

S. S. Banks 1810.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE
WILLIAM WENTWORTH FITZWILLIAM,
EARL FITZWILLIAM,
Viscount Hilton and Lord Fitzwilliam,
Baron of Milton in England,

AND

Earl Fitzwilliam, Viscount Miltown, and Baron Fitzwilliam of Liffer in Ireland,

MY LORD,

INDUCED by what, we hope, may be justly termed a laudable ambition to preserve a particular account of the honour conferred by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on our native city, we offer to the public the following Work.

WE presume to dedicate it to your Lordship, from the most perfect conviction that you will view, with a favourable eye, any effort to record an event that must ever be considered as a most flattering and distinguished compliment to a city, for the honour and prosperity of which your Lordship has constantly evinced a most anxious and friendly zeal.

WE have ventured to add a sketch of the Magnificent Entertainment given by your Lordship to his Royal Highness at Wentworth-House; an entertainment most truly characteristic of the exalted mind of the noble Donor.

THE Poetical Address, with which the book concludes, we have been favoured with by the Author, a gentleman who has had the merit to deserve, and the good fortune to experience, your Lordship's patronage.

With all due deference and respect
we are,

Your Lordship's very faithful and devoted servants,

TOUR to YORK.

MONDAY, AUGUST 24, 1789.

ON MONDAY afternoon their Royal Highnesses, the PRINCE of WALES and DUKE of YORK, appeared upon the race-ground.

In order to gratify the anxious desire of the populace, they descended from their carriages at some distance from the field, and proceeded on horseback, over the course, to the Grand Stand, accompanied by EARL FITZWILLIAM, Mr. WENTWORTH, and several other gentlemen, who went from the city to meet them.

The ROYAL BROTHERS were most joyfully received by an immense number of Nobility and Gentry on the Grand Stand; and, indeed, all descriptions of people seemed anxious to express every token of affectionate joy.

After the race, they came in Earl Fitzwilliam's carriage to this city, at the entrance of which they were met by a number of its inhabitants, who took the horses from the carriage, and drew them in triumph through the city to the DEANERY*, then the residence of Earl Fitzwilliam, amidst the resounding acclamations of such a concourse of delighted people as were never before assembled together in this place on any occasion——

“ I saw them, while th' enraptur'd crowd,

“ With acclamations long and loud,

“ Throughout old EBOR's venerable streets

Proclaim'd the happy day †.”

They dined with the noble EARL; and at half-past eight o'clock the Prince of Wales went to the Theatre. His Royal Brother being indisposed, from the fatigue of the journey, retired to his lodgings.

* Dr. Fountayne, the Dean of York, has for many years past complimented the late most noble Marquis of Rockingham, and his present illustrious successor, with the use of the Deanery, during the York race-week.

TOUR TO YORK.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 25, 1789.

ON Tuesday the Sheriffs* of the city of York waited upon his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, at twelve o'clock, to know when he would receive the Corporation. His Royal Highness was pleased to appoint that day, at two o'clock.

Accordingly the LORD MAYOR, ten of the ALDERMEN, the two SHERIFFS, and a numerous body of the COMMONALTY, preceded by the officers of the Corporation and the city band of music, went in their formalities to the Deanery; where they were most graciously received by the Prince.

They presented his Royal Highness with the FREEDOM of their ancient city in an elegant GOLD BOX; a particular description of which will be given in the following pages.

The address was read by Mr. Townend, the town clerk; to which his Royal Highness returned the annexed answer, in a pathetic elegant manner, which added energy to the very beautiful sentiments it contained.

* Mr. Theophilus Davye Garencieres, and Mr. John Hay.

The Address of the CORPORATION of the CITY of YORK to his Royal Highness, GEORGE, PRINCE of WALES.

" May it please your ROYAL HIGHNESS,

" THE Lord Mayor and Corporation of the city of York,
" animated with the most lively gratitude for the high honour
" conferred on this ancient city by your presence, beg leave
" to approach your Royal Person with the utmost respect
" and most cordial affection: This honour, Sir, is greatly in" creased by your Royal Highness being the only Heir Ap" parent to the imperial crown of this realm, whom they " have ever had the felicity personally to address.

" They cannot resist the present favourable opportunity of " expressing their just admiration of, and unfeigned acknow-
" ledgments for, the wisdom and moderation which so emi-
" nently distinguished the affectionate and princely conduct
" of your Royal Highness in the most awful and trying situa" tion, when all men looked up to your Royal Highness for " protection with the fullest assurance of receiving it; and " blessed as this kingdom hath been by Divine Providence in
" the happy recovery of our most gracious Sovereign, (for " whom they entertain the warmest sentiments of duty and " loyalty) it is their fervent prayer that when it shall please
" the Almighty to call his Majesty to an heavenly throne,
" your Royal Highness may succeed him in the hearts and
" affection of a free, brave, and loyal people, and long live

“to reign over them with the happiness and glory of a Patriot “King.

“Your Royal Highness is respectfully entreated to permit
“your Royal Name to be enrolled amongst the freemen of “this ancient city, and to accept the freedom thereof, which “is thus humbly offered for your Royal Highness’s gracious “reception.”

His ROYAL HIGHNESS’S Answer to the Address of the CORPORATION of the CITY of YORK.

“My LORD MAYOR and GENTLEMEN,

“I THANK you for your loyal and affectionate address, and “for the satisfaction which you express at my visit to the “city of York.

“It gives me very sincere pleasure that my conduct has “been properly understood by you, and that my opinions, as “to the powers necessary to have been trusted to me for the “general welfare, have not been mistaken by the respectable “citizens of York for an extravagant lust of power, or an “unbecoming haste to assume that seat, which to be called to
“as late as possible is the constant and warmest wish of my “heart. Impelled with these sentiments, I must, above all “others, rejoice in that happy event which is the subject of “your joyful congratulations, and which touches my feel"ings not more as an affectionate son, than as the person the "most interested in every thing which concerns the pro"sperity and happiness of the realm.

"I with pleasure accept the freedom of this ancient city,
 "and your offer of enrolling my name amongst its citizens."

COPY of the FREEDOM.*

THE OATH OF EVERY FREEMAN OF THIS CITY.

THIS hear you, my Lord Mayor, Mr. Chamberlain, and good men: That I from henceforth shall be true and trusty to our Sovereign Lord King George and to this city of York;
 and the same city shall save and maintain to our said Sovereign Lord the King and his successors; and all the franchises and freedoms of this same city maintain and uphold with the best of my power and cunning, and with my body and goods, so often as it shall need my help. So help me God,

AND shall be obedient to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of this city, that are, or shall be for the time being, and justified after the laws, customs, and orders of this same city; and no man known that useth buying and selling, in any craft or occupation as master, and not franchised, but you shall present the same to the Lord Mayor, Chamberlain, or Com-

* This was beautifully ornamented with the City Arms, Festoons of Oak Branches, &c. by Mr. Joseph Halfpenny of York.

mdn Clerk, for the time being; the goods of any stranger, or men unfranchised, you shall not avow for your own, by which the Lord Mayor or Sheriffs may lose their tolls or customs, or any other duties that belong to them: the counsels and privities of this same city you shall well and truly keep; and all these points and articles before rehearsed shall hold enenist you; and for nothing let, but you shall so do. So help you God.

In the time of THOMAS HARTLEY, Esq; LORD MAYOR.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS,

GEORGE, PRINCE OF WALES,

HAVING graciously condescended to accept of the Freedom of the ancient city of York, was admitted thereto by the Mayor and Commonalty of the same, the twenty-second day of August, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-nine; and the same is most humbly presented to HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS by their unanimous order, as a testimony of their profound esteem and respect for HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, and of the high sense they entertain of the honour conferred on them by HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS' accepting the same, and favouring this city with his presence, and as a token of their unfeigned gratitude for the patriotism and princely virtues of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.*

Examined by

GEO. TOWNEND,

Common Clerk of the said City.

* The order of the house was made on the twenty-second of August, but the Freedom was actually presented on this day, August the twenty-fifth.

His Royal Highness was attended upon this occasion by His Royal Highness attended the Race; dined with Earl Fitzwilliam; and was at the Assembly in the evening, where he danced with Lady Elizabeth Howard, daughter of Earl Fauconberg (the new married Lady of the Hon. Charles Howard, heir to his Grace the Duke of Norfolk).

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1789.

THE Prince of Wales had a levee this morning, at Mr. Alderman Bluit's house in Blakestreet (his Royal Highness's residence during his abode in York); when he received the greatest part of the Nobility and Gentry then in the city. He dined with a select party at Earl Fitzwilliam's, and honoured the Assembly Rooms in the evening with his presence.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1789.

THIS day the Prince of Wales, after partaking of the amusements of the morning, honoured the Lord Mayor with his company at dinner in the Mansion-House; where his Royal Highness was entertained in the highest style of splendour. The choicest wines and fruits, and every delicate rarity that could be procured, were served on this occasion.

The day was conducted with the greatest order and regularity, and the whole company were extremely happy: Every countenance expressed that real heartfelt joy, which all must feel in the presence of the Prince of Wales, particularly in those hours when MIRTH and CONVIVIALITY are blended with that ELEGANCE OF MANNERS, and PRINCELY DEPORTMENT, which have ever distinguished his Royal Highness.

The Prince was pleased, most particularly, to express his approbation of the polite attention shewn to him by the Lord Mayor and Corporation; and intimated his intention of presenting them with his full-length picture, to be placed in their State-Room, along with those of the late KING WILLIAM III. of glorious and immortal memory; the late illustrious KING GEORGE II.; and of the late most Noble MARQUIS of ROCKINGHAM.

An excellent band of music, and the judicious selection of their performance, under the direction of Mr. Thackray, were highly approved by the Prince and several other Amateurs in the science.

His Royal Highness having bespoke a performance* at the Theatre that evening, retired a little after nine.

The following NOBILITY and GENTRY were invited, but were not present :

His Royal Highness the DUKE OF YORK.

His Grace the Arch-	Lord H. Fitzroy	Mr. Markham
bishop of York	Sir John Kaye	Mr. Garforth
Earl Fitzwilliam	Sir Frank Standish	Mr. Craythorne
Earl of Carlisle	Sir Bellingham Greame	Col. Tarleton
Lord Morpeth	Sir William St. Quintin	Mr. Alderman Raper
Lord Hawke	Mr. Wyndham	Mr. Alderman Jubb
Lord Foley	Mr. B. Thompson	Mr. Alderman Cordley
Lord Petre	Mr. Wentworth	Mr. Alderman Myres
Lord Arch. Hamilton	Lieut. Col. Radcliffe

His Royal Highness, in a few minutes after he left the Mansion-House, entered the Theatre, accompanied by a great number of the Nobility;—where he was received, as he has been in every other public place, with the most affectionate and repeated bursts of applause and welcome, which marks of respect were returned by his Royal Highness with his usual affability.

The Manager had used every exertion to ENTERTAIN, and to render the Theatre commodious, it was beautifully painted and decorated in honour of his Royal Highness, and illuminated with an extraordinary number of wax lights, which gave a distinct view of the most brilliant and crowded audience this house, or any other in the kingdom, out of London, was ever honoured with. In the language of the Theatres it was really *overflowing, for several hundreds could not be admitted. Animated by the Royal Presence, and such an amazing display of grandeur, the PERFORMERS exerted themselves to the utmost, and deservedly gained general applause.

The matchless powers of that incomparable, and justly celebrated actress, Miss FARREN, shone out in all their full force, with most uncommon lustre. We cannot do justice to this lady's merit—Hear what DELLA CRUSCA sings!—

From her own garden BEAUTY chose,
In all its blooming pride, the ROSE,
And from the feather'd race, the DOVE;
Then, FARREN! on thy cheek she threw
The blushing flower's enchanting hue,
Then form'd thy temper from the BIRD of LOVE.

Whether thou shew'st with matchless skill
Unsteady FASHION's froward will,
As heartless MAID, or heedless WIFE,
Truth, nature, sentiment, prevail
And thro' the mirth-inspiring tale
All FICTION seems absorb'd in REAL LIFE.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 28, 1789.

ON Friday morning his Royal Highness breakfasted at Mr. Jolliff's at Nun Monkton. His Royal Highness appeared on the race-ground—dined with the Archbishop at his Grace's palace at Bishopthorpe—in the evening went to the Assembly—opened the Ball with Lady Mexbrough—and danced country-dances with Mrs. Baker.

His Royal Highness gave a Plate of 50*l.* to be run for on the morrow, over Knavesmire, by three and four-year olds—two-mile heats.

Earl Fitzwilliam also gave a plate of the like value; which produced an excellent race, and was won by the Prince of Wales's horse Tot.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1789.

EVERY place of public entertainment has been honoured with the Prince's attention, and his engaging affability charmed all around.

TOUR TO YORK.

MORNING CONCERT.

BY COMMAND OF

His Royal Highness the PRINCE of WALES.

This morning his Royal Highness attended the Concert. There were four morning concerts, viz. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

Amongst a most respectable Band the principal performers were,

Signor IGNATIUS RAIMONDI, First Violin.

Mr. SHARP, First Hautboy.

And, Mr. REINAGLE, Violoncello.

THE VOCAL PARTS BY

Madame PIELTAIN, and Mrs. HUDSON.

Several very excellent solo concertos were performed by those masters on their respective instruments; and the two ladies who performed the vocal parts were happy in the selection of their songs, from ANFOSI, SACCHINI, GIORDINI, BERTONI, &c. and very deservedly met with the applause of the audience.

The celebrated BATTLEPIECE, composed by RAIMONDI, was performed with great applause.

After the race of this day, the Prince of Wales set off for Castle-Howard, the seat of Earl Carlisle, about fourteen miles from this city; where his Royal Highness dined, and remained there till Monday morning, when he returned to York, and, together with the Duke of York, proceeded southwards. The Prince of Wales dined at Byram with Sir John Ramsden; thence his Royal Highness proceeded to Wentworth-House, the seat of Earl Fitzwilliam, where preparations were making for a grand GALA, in honour of the ROYAL VISITOR. The Duke of York, who still continued indisposed, departed for the metropolis. It is with the utmost regret we observe, that the Duke of York was so extremely ill, during his stay amongst us, as to be deprived of every public amusement,

The elegance and condescension with which the Prince of Wales behaved upon all occasions, and to all descriptions of people, during his stay in this city, will, it is hoped, nay, it must, secure to him the most zealous affection of all its inhabitants. People of all ranks and situations seemed to vie with each other in shewing his Royal Highness the most dutiful, and the most loyal respect: But what must endear the ROYAL BROTHERS most of all, to every good mind, was their extensive benevolence and charity—for they, literally, CLOTHED THE NAKED—FED THE HUNGRY—AND SET THE PRISONER FREE!

Colonel St. Leger, by order of their Royal Highnesses, the Prince of Wales and Duke of York, paid into the hands of Walter Fawkes, Esq; High-Sheriff of the County of York, two hundred guineas, to be laid out for the relief of debtors confined in the Castle of York, who are objects of charity.—Also twenty guineas to Mr. Clayton, the gaoler, to be applied to the clothing of the female convicts ordered for transportation.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales also paid for the discharge of several debtors confined in Ousebridge-gaol in this city; who are thereby enabled to return to, and provide for, their distressed families; and has likewise directed clothes to be purchased for the felons ordered for transportation, and bread to be distributed weekly to the prisoners in that gaol and the House of Correction, who stand committed for certain times, during the remainder of their confinement.

The Assembly-Rooms, in Blakestreet, were new painted and beautified on this occasion.—The assemblies were very brilliant—the following is a list of the NOBILITY and GENTRY who appeared there this race-week.

SUPERB ENTERTAINMENT
WENTWORTH-HOUSE,

On WEDNESDAY, September 2, 1789.

ON Monday evening, August 31, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales arrived at Wentworth-House, the seat of the Right Honourable Earl Fitzwilliam; and on Wednesday his Lordship, in honour of his Royal Visitor, gave the most splendid and magnificent entertainment that was ever known in this part of England. In expectation of the illustrious Prince, not less than twenty thousand people were assembled before the front of the house early in the afternoon. About four he returned from a morning-visit to Lord Strafford. He alighted from his horse amidst the huzzas of thousands, and, with his usual affability, exhibited himself in the portico of the saloon, and was received with the greatest applause.

After this, the Prince, and the Nobility that were with him, retired to dinner. Large bonfires were lighted on the eminences of the park. After dinner, the Prince, Lord and Lady Fitzwilliam, his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, Sir Thomas Dundas and family, and other gentlemen of distinction, the suite, &c. appeared again in the portico, and, by means of a speaking trumpet, held intercourse with the delighted multitude. A call of silence being made, "The King's health" was drank by the Prince, and followed by loud and repeated acclamations. The Prince after this again filled his glass, and gave the two following toasts: first, "Happiness to the People;" second, "Prosperity to the Manufacturers of Yorkshire." Lord Fitzwilliam proclaimed three toasts from the top of the balustrade: "The Prince's health" was first given, which met with the most ardent shouts of applause. His Lordship then drank "The Duke of York," and afterwards "The Duke of Clarence."—The Duke of Norfolk gave, "Loyalty to the King, Love to the Prince, and Freedom to the People." The spectators were all this while gratified by the Prince's presence, who, for some part of the time, held up Lord Milton, (a fine boy, three years old) the only child of Earl Fitzwilliam, to see and be seen by surrounding thousands. The company then retired to dress for the ball, which was opened at half-past ten.—It is impossible to describe its brilliancy, the outlines only can be given, and the imagination of the reader must supply the rest.

The saloon is a very large square room, twelve yards high, in the middle of which is a gallery. Variegated marble pillars run up on each side niches, which contain statues of Heathen deities, &c. The fire-places were hidden by a profusion of flowering shrubs and aromatics in pyramidal forms, which had a cool, pleasing effect. Pendent from the ceiling hung a circular chandelier, which contained about two hundred very large tapers. As close as they could be placed, round the lower edge of the gallery, hung three rows of various-coloured lamps of a globular form; under the gallery they hung in loops; on the marble pillars they were all white, and festoons of different coloured ones connected the pillars round the room—the space above each festoon being filled with lamps in the form of a diamond, alternately green, blue, red, yellow, &c. the contrasted colours greatly heightening the effect.—Round the cornice, at the top, the same order was observed, but the lights were not so numerous. The whole number of these small lamps were eight thousand two hundred and fifty.

The most high-wrought conceptions must fall short of the singular brilliancy of the scene at first entering, increased by the elegant assemblage of ladies and gentlemen—the former in charming light fancy dresses, composed of white and coloured sarfnets, chambray gauzes, tiffany, or muslin, richly ornamented with silver and gold fringes; the head-dresses, chiefly small hats, on the back or side of the head, ornamented with plumes of feathers, and wreaths of flowers, intermixed with brilliants, pearls, &c. His Royal Highness and his suite wore the Windsor uniform (which is blue, superbly embroidered with gold, and red cuffs and collar), the major part of the gentlemen in plain coats, and fancy waistcoats.

The Prince opened the ball by a minuet with the beautiful and accomplished Countess of Mexborough; he also led her down two country dances—and we must here in justice observe, that his Royal Highness's dancing is in the most completely elegant style of any gentleman's we have ever seen.

The unaffected condescension of his Royal Highness's behaviour, and the cheerful satisfaction of his looks, must have been highly pleasing to his Noble Host, and impressed the distinguished guests with the most flattering idea of his affable disposition.

At a quarter after two, the supper-rooms were thrown open, and displayed such a profusion of delicious viands and elegant decorations, as very rarely meet the eye: The tables in each room formed three sides of a square, and rich parterre frames were placed in the centre of each table, some of which had small upright pillars, with medallions on foil pendant, each pillar connected with wreaths of artificial flowers, the bottom of the frames filled with small sweetmeat figures; every table had equally beautiful, but different devices. On each side, at regular, though not far distant spaces, silver branches, with five lights, were placed, and filled up between with raspberries, strawberries, plums, nectarines, &c. &c. in fluted oval jelly figures, so transparent as to shew the fruit as perfect as on the trees; real wild boar collared, was covered with artificial heads of composition, as large as life; the potted venison was covered with beautiful stags; swans also of the like magnitude, and perfection of form; profusion of the choicest fruits, &c. and every rarity money could purchase, or fancy conceive.

To enumerate every delicacy, or every ornament, would exceed all proper limits, and we can enter no farther into the table decorations than remarking, that the Prince's supper-room, and one other room, were served entirely on plate!—in the former, the side-table embellishments, for the greater part, were solid gold! in particular we noticed three superb gold vases, and that the side-table itself appeared inlaid and ornamented with gold! The useful, as well as ornamental furniture of the room and table, transcend our feeble praise, and to eyes unused to contemplate such luxurious exertions of taste, it must appear like the fairy dreams of a romantic imagination. After supper, the company returned to the ball-room, from whence they did not depart till six o'clock, and then it was with difficulty they prevailed with themselves to quit the magic ground, where Taste, Elegance, and Affability, formed spells almost too powerful to be broken by sober Reason.

It was supposed there were about three hundred carriages at Wentworth-House. The servants and post-boys were all entertained with a good substantial cold collation in the riding-house (which is capable of holding several hundreds without inconvenience); and, much to the credit of so numerous a company of servants of all descriptions, the utmost regularity and order was preserved—The populace in the park were regaled with sixty hogsheds of ale, which, like so many pieces of artillery, did amazing execution: Numbers of stout, able-bodied men were, by its potent influence, brought low. Sorry we are to relate, that one of the waggons, loaded with ale, after the horses were taken out, was set agoing down the hill; a man endeavouring to stop it, was run over and so much bruised that he died the next morning; another had an arm broke, and a third a foot terribly crushed: But, amongst such a multitude, the wonder is that no more accidents happened,

The Prince left Wentworth-House on Thursday to dine with the Hon. Mr. Savile, at Rufforth in Nottinghamshire, and carried with him the happy consciousness of having impressed all ranks of people with the highest opinion of his manners and conduct: and he was graciously pleased to exprefs uncommon satisfaction at the whole of his Yorkshire Journey, and highly commended the decorum observed by such a numerous body of people as were assembled on the ball-night at Wentworth-House. Lord Fitzwilliam's household had all rich dresses on the occasion.

No public entertainment of any kind (that given at Windsor only excepted) was ever so liberally furnished, so elegantly displayed, or so properly conducted as the above.

DESCRIPTION
OF THE
G O L D B O X,

PRESENTED BY

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF YORK

To his Royal Highness
The PRINCE of WALES.

THE form of the Box is OCTAGON;—four inches and one-fourth in length,—three inches broad,—and one inch and an half in depth.

THE TOP. (Plate I.)

ON the top are the ARMS of the CITY of YORK, elegantly chased in gold, encircled by a WREATH of OAK, and a chased LAUREL-LEAF BORDER around the edge.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BOX.

THE FRONT. (Plate II. Fig. 1.)

ON the front is the SWORD OF STATE, the MACE, and the HAT OF MAINTENANCE, richly ornamented and interwoven with BRANCHES of LAUREL; in which trophy a RIBAND is introduced, containing the following motto:

REGIUS CIVIS EBORACI.

"A ROYAL CITIZEN OF YORK."

THE BACK. (Plate II. Fig. 3.)

ON the back is a SHIELD with the PRINCE OF WALES'S ARMS,—an IMPERIAL CROWN on the top: On the left side are the FEATHERS, combined with the CAP OF LIBERTY;—and on the opposite side a BRANCH of LAUREL. A RIBAND is also interwoven, with this motto:

AMICUS LIBERTATIS, ET GLORIA BRITANNIÆ.

"THE FRIEND OF LIBERTY, AND THE GLORY OF BRITAIN."

THE ENDS. (Plate II. Fig. 2.)

ON the ends are the PRINCE OF WALES'S CREST, a PLUME of FEATHERS issuing from the CROWN, with the motto—

ICH DIEN.

THE SHUTTING.

THE shutting is ornamented by PLUMES and STARS, alternately placed, and connected by RIBANDS flowing from each side of the PLUMES. And,

INSIDE THE LID (Plate III.)

IS the INSCRIPTION, beautifully engraved upon a gold plate.

THE engravings give the exact shape and size of the Box.

THE whole was executed by Mr. William Charron *, late of Marlbro' Street, now of Thatch'd-house Court, St. James's, (under the direction of Mr. William Clarke) from a design by Mr. Frederick Atkinson of York.

* Mr. Charron executed the Freedom-Box, presented to the late Lord Keppell in 1779,—and the Freedom-Box, presented by the English Merchants at Hambro' to the Duke of York in 1782;—also one presented by the city of Kilkenny to the Duke of Clarence.

POETICAL ADDRESS

ROYAL BROTHERS

THE PRINCE OF WALES

THE DUKE OF YORK

BY THE REV. JOHN PARKER
OF THE CHURCH OF ST. MARTIN, VINCE

POETICAL ADDRESS, &c.

STRUCK, by that awful, chaf't'ning, pow'rful hand,
Whose force ev'n mighty monarchs can't withstand;
Trembling my limbs*,—confus'd my wand'ring brain,
Lost each idea, and each tuneful strain;
Sad Hope the gloomy prospect did deplore,
And, sick'ning, bade me tempt the Muse no more:
So when the glowing, bright, ethereal fire,
Which oft some favour'd prophet did inspire,
His angry God has quench'd—he mourning lies,
Despair increasing as his rapture dies.

O GRACIOUS PROVIDENCE! how much I owe
Thy guardian pity, in this vale of woe!
In Trouble's needy hour, one friendly ray
Chas'd the dark shadows of the gloom away;
While Reason, from the chaos, 'gan to dawn,
Resum'd her lustre, and unclouded shone!
'Twas then, GREAT PRINCES! that the welcome news,
Thro' all our streets, pleas'd rumour did diffuse,

* A violent nervous fever.

That ENGLAND'S HOPES, fam'd BRUNSWICK'S ROYAL RACE,
Old EBOR, and her festive train, would grace!
Sudden and swift, as the electric fire,.

Or joys pervading the celestial quire,
From heart to heart, the dear relation flew,
And all was RAPTURE, LIBERTY—and YOU!

To sing the gen'ral joy, and gen'ral praise,
Too faint the Muse's loyalty displays;
For patriotic love doth fast entwine
(As ivy clasps the oak) round BRUNSWICK'S LINE,
While mem'ry can, in lively tints, pourtray
Th' historic tale of ENGLAND's fore dismay,
When Freedom shudder'd, at a Stuart's name,
And your GREAT ANCESTOR to Britain came,
To guard the blooming fruit, whose native soil
No kingdom boasts—but this our native isle!

To stop a Stuart's arbitrary hand,
From tyrannizing o'er this happy land:
While, in my anxious heart, the patriot flame,
Which rais'd BRITANNIA to her topmast fame,
Bids honest Recollection strictly ask,
How your FAM'D RACE perform'd this glorious task?
And, from th' historic page, she cries aloud,
And thousands echo, from the grateful crowd!
“Freedom and Commerce, on our happy shore,
“Rose to a glorious height, unknown before;

“ Shelter’d from Insult, by the genial wings
“ Of BRUNSWICK’S ROYAL HOUSE, OUR PATRIOT KINGS;
“ Who to their hostile foes destruction hurl’d,
“ And ENGLAND made the STOREHOUSE of the world!”
I feel th’ impassion’d love, my country’s flame,
In raptures glow, at ROYAL BRUNSWICK’S name;
The flame, which love of Liberty inspires,
And, every British heart, with rapture fires!

PRIDE of our LAND! ’tis not the bard alone,
But the full voice of this rejoicing town,
Whose shouts proclaim their loyalty and love,
Warm from the heart!——which time can ne’er remove;
Think not that courts to truest friends give birth;
Your ROYAL SIREs found real ones in the North.
When madd’ning Zeal, for Stuart’s desp’rate cause,
Attack’d old ENGLAND’S liberties, and laws,
Hoping to pull your fam’ly from the throne,
And make a lasting tyranny their own;
DEV’NSHIRE, and ROCKINGHAM, in Danger’s hour,
Boldly stept forth, with all their friends and pow’r;
Their lives and fortunes, at their King’s command,
That BRUNSWICK’S RACE might rule this happy land.
As courage, in the gen’rous lion, runs
Untainted, unimpair’d, from fires to fons;
So, in THEIR NOBLE PROGENIES, we find
ENGLAND’S and BRUNSWICK’S dearest love combin’d!

48 A POETICAL ADDRESS, &c.

O ROCKINGHAM! no time can e'er efface
 From my tenacious memory, the trace
 Of all thy PATRIOT VIRTUES!—which Despair
 Persuaded, Fate itself could not repair:
 But Hope, the suff'rer's animating friend,
 Bade me, with her, my weary steps to bend
 To brighter prospects;—where, a cloudless sky
 Discover'd to my wond'ring, ravish'd eye,
 A NOBLE YOUTH, born to enjoy his FAME,
 His FORTUNE, MERIT—all things but his NAME!
 His form he bore—his look all bounteous, kind——
 The GODLIKE PICTURE of his GODLIKE MIND!
 Pensive, he dropt the pious, filial tear,
 With swooning grief, on his GREAT UNGLE's bier;——
 That tribute paid, to th' holy saint at rest,
 He chas'd the manly sorrow from his breast;
 Then, like a truly noble BRITISH PEER,
 His country's weal became his constant care!——
 O Britain! ev'ry patriot must entwine
 AUGUSTUS' dearest, valu'd name, with thine;
 His ROYAL OFFSPRING love—his SONS ADORE!——
 FITZWILLIAM does, from his heart's inmost core:
 While PORTLAND, NORFOLK, BEDFORD, high-born men,
 CARLISLE, and DERBY, with a num'rous train,
 Of ENGLAND's first nobility the FLOW'R,
 Unite their HEARTS, their INFLUENCE, and POW'R,

And their rich BLOOD, their FORTUNES,—ALL would spend,
Your ROYAL HOUSE, your RIGHTS—your COUNTRY to defend!

ILLUSTRIOUS WALES! thy rev'renc'd, much lov'd name,

Stands foremost in the sacred lists of Fame;
Where she's inroll'd each dutious, loving child,
Whose sympathizing, tender cares beguil'd
The heavy sorrows of a SUFF'RING SIRE!
The Saviour of the world did sure inspire
Thy heav'nly conduct, so much like his own!
And seldom seen so near an earthly throne!
The wond'ring world stood gazing, with surprise,
And Britons, on reflection, idolize
The PIOUS, TENDER, FILIAL HEART that bled
O'er dismal woes,—pour'd on his ROYAL FATHER's head!
This gleam, this sparkling ray of richest light,
Shot thro' the gloom, and cheer'd their longing sight;
A joyful portent, that (should Fate remove His Father, to a diadem above)
This second Sov'reign of the BRITISH LINE,
Would prove another, glorious CONSTANTINE!

Blest be the GUARDIAN ANGEL's trembling hand,
That turn'd aside, by Heaven's divine command,
The whizzing ball, charg'd with thy death, O YORK!
By SANGUINARY LENOX!—murd'rous work!

The gladd'ning angel did, with rapture, view
Thy narrow 'scape!—and shouted, as he flew——
“ My arduous task is o'er!—the high command,
“ Which Heav'n confided to my fearful hand,
“ Is well perform'd!—Thy life no more expose,
“ Till fir'd, with rage, against thy country's foes,
“ Thou fight her battles—all her wrongs repay;
“ And dauntless hosts, to glory, lead the way!”

Majestic, fair inhabitant of light!

Touch my seal'd lips, before thou wing'st thy flight;
My verse, with true prophetic fire, inflame,
To sing of warlike deeds, and heroes' fame!——

Thanks to thy gen'rous hand!—my bosom glows,
As the immortal inspiration flows;
My mind receives th' illuminating rays,
That ALBION's glory shews, in future days;
When YORK, like FRED'RICK, whose great name he bears,
Shall strike BRITANNIA's foes, with timid fears!
Or, if their hostile squadrons dare advance,
Secure in numbers, like the troops of France
On Cressy's plains; the YOUTH, in front of war,
Like meditating CÆSAR shall appear;
With martial, dreadful eye—resolv'd, and stern!
And now with RAGE, and now with GLORY burn!
But when his flaming sword, like lightning, gleams,
And throws, across the field, its deathful beams,

His high command unchains the furious storm—
Uproar and Death the beauteous lines deform;
Terror stalks far—with Slaughter by her side—
And the field's flooded with a purple tide!
The WARRIOR feels his martial flame aspire,
As Courage drives him on, thro' smoke and fire,
To teach the thund'ring cannons where to roar,
And where to dye the sward with mortal gore!
To teach fix'd bay'nets to repulse the foe,
And fearless, at their head, thro' danger go;
The choicest ranks, embattled, to engage,
Fierce as a roaring lion, in his rage;
And ne'er to wounds, fatigue, or danger yield,
Till conquest crown the well-fought, glorious field!

YORK shall our troops—CLARENCE our fleets command,
And on the deck like godlike Neptune stand!
Unaw'd, by all the terrors of the main,
He braves the sea, as YORK the bloody plain!—
Protecting Heav'n! afford propitious gales—
His country's safety to defend, he sails;
Her commerce to protect—the richest gem
That ever grac'd her Monarch's diadem!
And, on the waves, if rash insulting foes
The BRITISH HERO, in his course, oppose,
BELLONA, the TERRIFIC GODDESS, stands
To guide the lightning from his furious hands;

TO BURN, to SINK, and their PROUD SHIPS DESTROY!
Thus HECTOR, swell'd with the big wrongs of Troy,
Pour'd out his veng'ance—(Greeks fled in amaze!)
And set a thousand vessels in a blaze!

The favour'd Bard the ROYAL BROTHERS saw,
Each, in his diff'rent way, to glory go;—
And as the love-sick maid, with pray'rs, pursues
Her absent swain,—thus prays my loyal Muse:
May CONCORD, LOVE, and HARMONY, and PEACE
Link HEART to HEART,—and UNION never cease!
May NATURE'S RICHEST BLESSINGS round you wait,
And make you HAPPY, as she's made you GREAT!
May EQUAL HONOURS, as you're HIGHLY BORN,
And BLOOMING LAURELS all your paths adorn,
Dear as the jewel, that we FREEDOM name,
And lasting—as ILLUSTRIOUS ENGLAND'S FAME!

THE END.
